Responsibility, Respect, Fairness, or Honesty?

What action should be taken?

The customer tells the project manager to increase the project cost estimates by 20% because his top management always asks to reduce the cost estimates. This is the way to get the money needed to complete the project.

A team member tells the project manager that he took a project tablet and sold it to get the money for his son's school fee. He has paid back by working overtime without reporting the hours worked.

What action should be taken?

The customer wants a data analyst on the team to perform statistical analysis on sales data. The project manager has a brother who is an expert data analyst so she is thinking about awarding the work to him.

A project manager discovers that the website of a project management company has published a very similar article (almost verbatim) to her article. She recalled that she previously had exchanged this article with the owner of this company when she met him at a global project manager conference.
